POSTDOCTORAL FELLOWSHIP OPPORTUNITY FOR HUMANITIES GRADUATE STUDENTS: An Information Session

Event: Information Session
Date: Friday, October 24, 2008
Time: 12:00-1:30 pm
Location: Graduate Student Commons, Quarry Plaza, Room 204
Who should attend: Humanities Ph.D. Students

On Friday, October 24, UCSC graduate Heather Waldroup (Ph.D., History of Consciousness, 2004) will be on campus to talk with humanities graduate students about the CLIR Postdoctoral Fellowship in Scholarly Information Resources.

Humanities Ph.D. students who are wondering what they'll do with their lives after getting their degrees are encouraged to attend!

The CLIR Postdoctoral Fellowship in Scholarly Information Resources offers recent Ph.D. recipients in the humanities opportunities to develop as scholars and teachers while learning about modern librarianship, digital resources, e-publishing, archives, and collection development.

Topics to be covered in this information session will include :

- Overview of CLIR, the Council for Library and Information Resources.
- The history of the CLIR Fellowship.
- The fellowship's relevance to Humanities scholars.
- Potential projects for a CLIR Fellow.
- The application process.
- Post-fellowship career opportunities.

Various universities host CLIR fellows for up to two years; current and recent CLIR fellows have served at Berkeley, UCLA, the University of Southern California, and the Claremont Colleges.

Please RSVP to gp3@ucsc.edu with the event title in the subject line to hold a place. Email heather.waldroup@libraries.claremont.edu with questions. Bring a brown bag lunch.

Sponsored by the UCSC Career Center Graduate Advising and UCSC Graduate Student Commons.
